ABSTRACT

Names and addresses of sources of materials for gifted education at the elementary and secondary levels, personally inspected and used by the author, are listed. Though called a "Bibliography," this is primarily a directory. It contains 89 entries, 63 of which are the names and addresses of publishers, associations, foundations, or other organizations. The remaining 26 entries appear to be for journals, newsletters, catalogs, or documents. Unfortunately the exact nature of each entry is not specified. The catalogs listed are said to be free in most cases. A submission form is included by the author for those wishing to submit material for inclusion in a future revision of this reference tool. GIFTED EDUCATION RESOURCES - A BIBLIOGRAPHY

INTRODUCTION

Although the educational concept of encouraging very capable students is not new; formal, organized programs in gifted education are comparatively recent. This bibliography was developed in response to numerous requests for sources of materials. There are many excellent materials available; but they frequently are not widely known and often addresses are incomplete or out-dated.

The resources listed have been personally inspected and used by the author and have been found useful. From an original list of over 160 entries, 90 judged most useful have been included. In most instances the catalogues are free. Where costs are known, they are listed and, of course, there will be costs for most materials ordered from the catalogues.

Space is left at the end of the Bibliography for additional entries so that this document may continue to be a current resource directory. If you are interested in promoting materials and resources for the gifted, a form has been included for you to have items included in future revisions of this bibliography.

To obtain any of the materials, simply write to the addresses listed and ask for their catalogue of materials. You may use the author's name as a reference if you desire. If you have comments or criticisms of any of the materials please let me know.
